

be exclusively representative of reptile and amphibian diversity in the study area. It seems that different habitat types act complementarily and contribute to the diversity of the herpetofauna. According to our results Tzoumerka mountains host an important herpetofauna that should be integrated in any future management plans of the area.